About the Journal

Nigerian Journal of Social Problems and Social Policy Review is a peer-reviewed quarterly publication. It is aimed at communicating social science researches relevant to the understanding and resolution of social problems that affect Nigerian society. It also provides a platform for scholars to dissect and recommend improvements to Nigeria's social policy instruments for better results.

The journal is committed to global best practices pertaining to rigorous empirical tradition and sound theoretical analysis. It publishes high quality discipline specific, interdisciplinary and multidisciplinary field researches, commentaries, case studies, reviews and debates that focus on:

- Conceptual, theoretical and methodological issues in social problems analysis
- Contemporary social problems, political and economic challenges of the Nigerian state
- Assessment of social policy interventions to social problems and development needs of the Nigerian state

Editorial Policy

The journal welcomes for applicable blind peer review, well researched articles, of not more than fifteen pages (including references), typed on A4 size paper, font 12, Microsoft word, and double spaced. References should be in American Psychological Association (APA) style, 7th edition.
